

The Bill Taylor Award

Prize Competition – College Students

A Student Research Contest has been designed for any college students who attend the 2018 Camden Conference. The basis of the contest is the submission of an 8-10 page evidence-based research paper focused on one specific challenge that confronts international refugees today as discussed during the 2018 Camden Conference the New World Disorder and America's Future. Possibilities include (but are not limited to) political, agricultural, economic, religious, ethnic, environmental, or social challenges the world faces and what possible solutions the United States may utilize to address them. The paper is to make a case for ways the U.S. should address your particular chosen issue. The research paper is due May 25, 2018. Judges include members of the Camden Conference Board of Directors and the Education Committee. Monetary prizes will be awarded!

Question:

Focusing on one specific area (for example: China, Europe, politics, agriculture, ecology, economics, globalization, women's issues), explain how the United States government and/or international institutions can more effectively address one of the current global challenges discussed at the 2018 Camden Conference. What role should the United States play in resolving your chosen topic, and how can your solution be implemented? Provide specific evidence for your answer.

Criteria:

- Eight to ten pages, double-spaced, 12-point Times New Roman font, plus citations and bibliography.
- Sources should include books, journal articles (optional: government documents), and information from Camden Conference presentations.

Due May 25, 2018.

- Please send your paper electronically to info@CamdenConference.org.
- Submissions must have full student name and school on the paper.
- Eligibility: any college student who attends the 2018 Camden Conference.
- To be eligible you must include your permission to publish the paper on the Winning papers will be presented on the Camden Conference website. A physical address will be needed where students can be reached during June and July in order to contact contest winners.